TO those who have not filled in the circulars sent to them for the 1926 issue of the "China Who's Who" through absence from China or other reasons, and to newcomers whose occupation in China and past activities elsewhere makes of them such as should find a place in the 1927 issue of the book,

THE COMPILER AND PUBLISHER

would be pleased to hear from and suggests that information be sent to him that is similar in form to what is printed herein. Their names will thus appear in the 1927 edition.

PREFACE

Whatever may be the outcome of the Chinese effort to win back from the foreigner in this country such rights as it is claimed he should not possess, it is at least perfectly certain that at no time in the future will the march of progress here be unattended by the foreigner's activities. Though they may wish it otherwise the Chinese themselves cannot deny this. The foreigner, who in lesser or greater degree is doing what he can to assist in the great effort to provide China with the benefits of western civilization, is to be found in all parts of the country. Who he is and exactly what he has done and is doing are questions which are asked everywhere.

It is the object of The China Who's Who to provide the answers to these questions, and it is because so many people think it should that we are able to do so.

It is quite noticeably evident to us that there remain but a few who do not yet agree with the idea of making public such details of their career as are of public interest. "Die-hards," who in years gone by have stayed out with a most discouraging pertinacity, have come in to the fold where they are very welcome. The few who remain are apparently not of a gregarious nature and we must leave them without any further dangling before their nose of the luscious carrot.

Again we thank those who continue to make it possible for us to provide the public with our biographical dictionary.

Each year the book grows more complete. We say it not with the idea of casting stones at the unfortunate but we have been imitated, as is perhaps known, by periodicals which do not now exist. The fact that we do is significant.

CARROLL LUNT.

These new names and corrections were received too late for inclusion in the ordinary section of the book and rather than hold them over till next year we have printed then hereunder. It is not in keeping with our wishes to do this as we believe that the volume will lose some of its handiness as a result, but the late arrival of information has more often been caused by temporary absenses from Shanghai than by actual tardiness. However we take the opportunity to request that in future years a special effort be made by those whose names appear in the book, to relieve us from the necessity of repeating the innovation.

Mr. Karakhan's Biography,

Lev Mikhailovitch Karakhan was born in Tiflis (Caucasus) in 1890. He studied law in the Petrograd University, Juridical Faculty. Mr. Karakhan joined the Revolutionary movement in 1904 and was active in it since then being three times in prison. He was exiled during the World War, against which he had taken a stand, and the February—March Revolution of 1917 found him in exile. Upon his return to Petrograd, Mr. Karakhan was elected member of the First All-Russian Central Executive Committee of the Soviets. Then, during the October Revolution he was member of the Bureau and Secretary of the Petrograd Soviet, and also member of the War-Revolutionary Committee, which directed the October Revolution in Petrograd. Ten days after the latter, Mr. Karakhan left for the negotiations with Germany, and at the beginning of 1918 was appointed Acting People's Commissary for Foreign Affairs. In 1921 he was appointed Russian Envoy to Poland. In August 1923 he was appointed Plenipotentiary Envoy to China and in October 1925—Assistant Commissary for Foreign Affairs. In the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs Mr. Karakhan directed the Eastern affairs.
